FDI – Inflows of US$10.3 billion in 1Q20, down 26.3% y/y

- The Ministry of Economy released the preliminary estimate of FDI in 1Q20
- During the quarter, our country received US10.3 billion in net inflows, declining 26.3% y/y, impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic
- By type of investment, most consisted of reinvested profits (76.1%). On the other hand, new investments represented 22.0%
- At the sector level, manufacturing received most of the resources, with 44.1% of the total. The second most benefited was financial services and insurance (24.9%)
- The US accounted for 38.9% of inflows, maintaining the trend as the country with the highest contribution
- We anticipate low investment levels during the rest of the year, strongly affected by the COVID-19 shock and its implications for both global and local economic activity and companies' financial positions

Foreign direct investment reaches US$10.3 billion in 1Q20. According to preliminary data released by the Ministry of Economy, net foreign direct investments was 26.3% y/y lower in nominal terms when compared to the same period of last year, reaching US$10.3 billion (see chart below), lowest for a comparable period since 2012. We believe this strong deceleration is explained mostly by uncertainty generated by the COVID-19 pandemic, which probably impacted flows since February and especially in March.

In particular, inflows stood at US$15.6 billion, while outflows reached US$5.3 billion. By type, 76.1% consisted of reinvested profits, 22.0% of new investments, and 1.9% of inter-company investments. It should be mentioned that this performance is similar to the one observed in other periods, as most reinvestments are accounted for during this quarter.

Manufacturing remains as the sector concentrating most investments. In this respect, this sector received 44.1% of total inflows, reaffirming its position as one of the key activities for our country's economy. Other relevant sectors include financial services (24.9%) and commerce (8.3%), as shown in the chart below on the left.

The US remains as the top investor. As it is usual, the US was the country with the highest share of investments in Mexico, representing 38.9% of the total. Moreover, we highlight that other countries with relevant investments include Spain (14.3%), Germany (9.4%), Canada (7.2%) and The Netherlands (4.6%), among others.

Strong impact from COVID-19. We believe that the significant deceleration in the quarter is driven by the COVID-19 pandemic, which has resulted not only in a negative shock to economic activity, but also has impacted sentiment going forward. In particular, we think that disruptions may have started as early as February, as the virus was spreading through China. Nevertheless, the most substantial shock probably came until March, in line with what we have seen in other figures for the month.

Low investment levels through 2020. Despite relatively favorable factors at the start of the year, such as the ratification of USMCA and diminished trade tensions, the story during the year will be COVID-19, therefore anticipating a strong reduction in FDI this year. In this context, the United Nation's Global Investment Trends Monitor estimates between a 30% and 40% decline in global FDI, which also paints a negative picture for Mexico, given that it is one of the main destinations for investment. In particular, we expect most weakness to concentrate in 2Q20, given that more stringent social distancing measures and the stoppage of non-essential activities started in April. After this, we could see a slight recovery towards the end of the year, although this is still highly uncertain and will depend not only from the evolution of the coronavirus outbreak, but on the outlook for short-term growth both globally and domestically. In this respect, we also see as relevant that the US has compromised a historic level of resources in several programs (both fiscal and monetary) aimed at protecting SMEs, which in case of an effective treatment or vaccine, could help make the eventual rebound more vigorous. Other potentially positive factor, although more on a mid-term basis, is that, businesses might be looking into diversifying their production capacity outside of Asia, with our country being a suitable substitute.

In contrast, we expect companies to backtrack on making strong investments at least this year, as the pandemic has already hit sales strongly and will also result in higher debt levels, with most businesses, big and small, prioritizing their liquidity and cash levels available to comply with their operating expenses and avoid closing operations, either temporarily or permanently.

Guide for investment recommendations

Even though this document offers a general criterion of investment, we urge readers to seek advice from their own Consultants or Financial Advisors, in order to consider whether any of the values mentioned in this report are in line with their investment goals, risk and financial position.

Determination of Target Prices

For the calculation of estimated target prices for securities, analysts use a combination of methodologies generally accepted among financial analysts, including, but not limited to, multiples analysis, discounted cash flows, sum-of-the-parts or any other method that could be applicable in each specific case according to the current regulation. No guarantee can be given that the target prices calculated for the securities will be achieved by the analysts of Grupo Financiero Banorte S.A.B. C.V, since this depends on a large number of various endogenous and exogenous factors that affect the performance of the issuing company, the environment in which it performs, along with the influence of trends of the stock market, in which it is listed. Moreover, the investor must consider that the price of the securities or instruments can fluctuate against their interest and cause the partial and even total loss of the invested capital.
