

Timely Indicator of Economic Activity – Entering 3Q21 at a slower pace

- Today, INEGI released its Timely Indicator of Economic Activity (IOAE, in Spanish) for June, as well as revised estimates for May
- May’s estimate picked up relative to the preliminary figure given a better performance in industry (already published), despite lower services. This would result in +0.6% m/m growth (+24.5% y/y; sa), more than compensating for the -0.2% seen in April
- For June, they forecast +0.3% m/m (14.7% y/y; sa), moderating as the recovery matures. However, it would still be favorable considering a more challenging backdrop regarding the virus. Inside, industry would fall (-0.7% m/m) with services still to the upside (0.4%)
- These estimates imply growth of 20.2% y/y in 2Q21, an inch lower than our current GDP estimate (excl. taxes) of 20.3%, suggesting more challenges by the end of the period and into the third quarter

Favorable performance in the remainder of 2Q21. INEGI released its Timely Indicator of Economic Activity (IOAE in Spanish), pointing to positive results. This is relevant considering that in June we saw a rebound in COVID-19 cases, a moderation in the pace of daily vaccinations and persistent supply-chain issues which likely affected dynamism. According to our calculations, this implies 20.2% y/y GDP growth in 2Q21 excluding taxes (original figures), an inch lower than our current forecast of 20.3%.

Acceleration in May... The forecast stands at +24.5% y/y (range: 23.2% to 25.9%), below the preliminary estimate by 24bps (sa). Nevertheless, total activity would grow 0.6% m/m, more than reversing April’s -0.2%. Industry surprised slightly higher again despite manufacturing weakness. Services are estimated at 0.3% m/m, weaker at the margin relative to the previous estimate but still with three consecutive months on the upside. Based on our calculations, the economy would have rebounded 24.4% y/y with original figures, recalling the sizable distortions introduced by base effects.

...but a modest advance in June. They estimate 14.7% y/y sa (range: 13.4% to 16.1%), resulting in +0.3% m/m. Specifically, we think part of the moderation could be associated to a more challenging base effect. Moreover, we think supply chain problems continue impacting industry, which is expected at -0.7% m/m. Nevertheless, and despite the increase in cases due to COVID-19’s ‘delta’ variant, services would grow 0.4%. With original data, we forecast +14.5 y/y, still highly skewed despite being the first month of reopening after lockdowns back in 2020.

This indicator is an effort by INEGI to forecast the monthly GDP-proxy IGAE five weeks in advance, which is very valuable. It is constructed through nowcasting methods, based on econometric models –which in turn rely on forward-looking high-frequency data to anticipate economic activity. By construction, INEGI publishes confidence intervals for these estimates; nevertheless, we focus only in the midpoint of these ranges.
